TAI CHI MOVEMENT AND MEMORY

A healthy diet and plenty of exercise go hand in hand in helping to prevent Alzheimer's disease and related cognitive decline as we age. If your looking for a good exercise option, consider Tai Chi.

Researchers found increases in brain volume and improvements on tests of memory and thinking in older adults who practiced Tai Chi three times a week. Studies have shown that dementia and gradual cognitive decline that precedes it are linked to shrinkage of the brain as nerve cells and their connections are lost.
